And now, back to the new tanning tax gripe. When I was first diagnosed with fibromyalgia, I was in bad shape. My whole entire body hurt and I was in a wheelchair for a few months. After weeks of therapy, I was slowly beginning to walk again. Some of the treatment I received was heat therapy. I thought, wouldn't it be great if I could find heat therapy for my whole body, besides spending hours under an electric blanket. Solution: a tanning bed. The heat from the lamps seemed to penetrate and relax my muscles and it had a lasting effect. I knew the dangers of indoor tanning, as well as outdoor tanning, and, of course, I took precautions.

On a night when the church is closed for cleaning, a young curate, who believes like Pastor Kerr that the entire miracle spectacle is somehow bogus, stands on a twelve-foot ladder trying to examine the eyes. Not a tall man, the muscular young curate stands on the eleventh ladder step to reach the corpus. Suddenly, he loses his balance and falls, slamming his head against a pew end. He dies of a broken neck in the arms of Pastor Kerr, but not before uttering, "Cave . cave ." (beware . beware .)!

You may wish to honor your departed loved one with special music. A friend of mine had an organ concert at church in her husband's memory, for example. If you decide to commission a song, relatives may be willing to help with the cost. A family picnic and sing-along is another way to honor your loved one. Music lingers in our minds and helps us to remember loved ones. We can continue to sing their song.
